

Uniformity of Wheat Grades Essential to Importance of Dominion Export Markets

Suggesting exclusion of all Garnet variety from Northern wheat grades, Dr. A. G. McCalla, of the University of Alberta, told the Turgeon royal grain commission uniformity within the various Canadian wheat grades was essential to maintenance of the Dominion's importance in export markets.

Critical of the low quality of all wheats grown in northern areas where there is wooded soil, Dr. McCalla said that what was needed for the north was a variety of wheat that had the early ripening and yield of Garnet and the high quality of Redwheat. All wheats grown in the north was weaker than the same wheat grown in the south, he added. So long as the board of grain commissioners permitted inclusion of Garnet in No. 3 Northern grades and the price for No. 3 Northern was above No. 1 and No. 2 C.W. Garnet to induce putting Garnet into No. 3 Northern, complaints could be expected on lack of uniformity.

Further suggesting Garnet wheat, said Dr. McCalla, were actually degrading it to get it into No. 3 Northern where a better price was paid. Although separate grades had been created when Garnet wheat was first grown in No. 1 and No. 2 Northern grades, the objective was defeated by farmers getting it into No. 3 Northern instead of the separate Garnet grades.

In fairness to all, said Dr. McCalla, he suggested Garnet wheat be barred from No. 1, 2, 3 and 4 Northern and that separate No. 3 and No. 4 C.W. Garnet grades be added to the present No. 1 and No. 2 C.W. Garnet grades. Dr. McCalla agreed with Mr. Justice Turgeon that the segregation of Garnet might mean eventual disappearance of the variety from the western plains. The recommendation for segregation was actually directed as discouraging production of Garnet, said Hon. J. L. Ralston, K.C., Montreal, commission counsel, and Dr. McCalla agreed.

Alberta, chiefly in the northern areas, produced about 50 per cent of the Garnet wheat in the Canadian crop, with Saskatchewan next and Manitoba contributing only a small amount, Dr. McCalla said. Most of the Garnet wheat in Saskatchewan was grown north of Saskatoon, he said.

There was no evidence that the protein content of wheat in any district or area of Canada was decreasing, said Dr. McCalla. An increase in the wheat growing area northward, he added, might bring about a decline in quality. Northern wheat was generally of a poorer quality than southern prairie wheat, he said.

Dr. McCalla agreed with L. W. Brockington, K.C., Winnipeg, counsel for the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, that there was a demand for low protein wheat. If Canada also was going to produce the weaker wheats, then they should be so labelled, said Dr. McCalla. He pointed out Canada's big business was in meeting demands for high quality wheat for blending purposes.

His recommendation for segregation of Garnet, chiefly grown in the north, might adversely affect northern farmers. "But it is high time somebody talked about the poor southern farmer who in selling No. 3 Northern is carrying the northern farmer," he added. The proposal, he added, would benefit all producers as a class.

Divorces Granted

Forty-Six Couples Granted Divorces at Ottawa During Last Session

Divorces were granted 46 couples at the session of parliament just ended, the largest number of any year since Ontario established its own divorce court in 1930. There were 61 applications, two from Prince Edward Island and 59 from Quebec, these being the only provinces lacking divorce machinery.

Divorces were granted in the two from Prince Edward Island and 44 from Quebec. The remaining 15 applications will have to await next session since the regulation delay of two months from service of notice on the respondents had not expired in time to permit dealing with them. Prince Edward Island, for many years without a single divorce action, has had less than half a dozen since confederation. There were two last year.

Request For Monkeys

A request for neglected zoo monkeys was in the will of Mrs. Berthe Marie Heer of South Norwood, London. She stipulated that if her will "to be applied in buying fruit to be distributed each year on the three bank holidays and on Boxing day among such of the monkeys as are inclined to be neglected by the public."

People Love Queen Mary

Crowds Greet Her With Affection Whenever She Appears

Since her move from Buckingham Palace to Marlborough House, Queen Mary has sought to return more to her private life. But the people seem unwilling to let her go.

In deference to her wishes they did not gather outside her house during the December crisis, nor was mention made of her comings and goings in the press. Yet crowds now collect whenever she goes shopping.

Though Her Majesty is the first Queen Mother in recent history to attend the Coronation of a son, it is understood she wishes to efface herself as much as possible. She is deliberately placing herself in the background but spontaneous public demonstrations of affection make this difficult. Crowds wave handkerchiefs and cheer when the King and Queen Elizabeth appear, but there is a particularly deep spontaneity to the greetings for Queen Mary.

"She has been with us so long and through so much," was the comment of one of the exhibiting manufacturers regarding a typical reception given Queen Mary at the British Industries Fair.

Friendly Relations Increased

By Visits To U.S. Of Lord Tweedsmuir And Premier King

Friendliness between Canada and the United States was greatly enhanced by recent visits of the Governor-General and the Prime Minister to Washington. Sir Herbert, Canadian Minister to Washington, said in an interview at Montreal.

"Lord Tweedsmuir carried himself in an extraordinary fine manner," said Sir Herbert. "He received magnificent reception in both the Senate and House of Representatives where he made charming and most cultured speeches."

Sir Herbert said the visits of Prime Minister King and Lord Tweedsmuir had been entirely personal and not political. They did much to increase the friendly sentiments between the two countries.

Prophesying development, tourist traffic and commercial trade with the United States in the coming years, Sir Herbert said "It is amazing to find how great an interest the Americans take in Canada. They seem to get tremendous pleasure in visiting the Dominion and when returning have nothing but good to say of the country, its people, and its institutions."

Adopting New Standards

Britain Using Latest Hygienic in Bacon Curing Plants

Britain's 600 bacon factories are adopting new standards of hygiene. High-powered hoses daily wash down slaughter-house and factory with hot water. Walls and ceiling are sprayed with disinfectant. All workers scrub their hands and arms before beginning and after leaving off work.

A pamphlet issued by the Bacon Development Board explains it is not a question of cleanliness. It is a matter of dealing correctly with bacteria; and bacteria have to be handled thoughtfully if flavor is to be preserved.

These micro-organisms must be allowed to do their work; but they cannot be allowed to work too hard. Too short or too long-lived bacteria spoil the bacon's flavor. Denmark discovered that years ago.

Having finished their beneficent career, the bacteria and their riotous little day in a weak solution of sodium hypochlorite. It destroys 6,000,000 to the square inch in five minutes.

Surgeons Asked To Co-Operate

Told How To Help In Germany's Four-Year Plan

German surgeons were called upon to aid the government in its four-year plan by avoiding use of foreign medical material products for which German "ersatz" (substitute) goods have been created.

The call was sounded by Professor Reinhold Stieh of the University of Goettingen at a meeting of the German Surgical Society.

"All hospitals and other surgeons must aid in realizing the aims of our Fuehrer," he said. "The difficulties of national economy do not permit a patriotic German doctor to stich up with cutgut—he must first ask himself if we do not have a German product as satisfactory and cheaper."

"Likewise, surgeons should not use up yards and yards of bandage in an inefficient and extravagant manner around the limbs of the wounded. Use instead amount of cotton where cellulose would do just as well."

Prospects Are Brighter

Experts Are Optimistic About Wheat Season's Harvest

Agriculture experts seemed optimistically indications prairie farmers this year will increase their wheat acreage and that western grain fields so far have enjoyed more precipitation than a year ago.

Rising prices, shrinking world supplies and growing needs of war-frightened European nations have given rise to belief barring unforeseen adverse factors the nation's grain growers should enjoy a more profitable season than last year.

Officials hoped prospect of increased demand would result in sowing this year of considerably more than the 25,288,000 acres that last summer produced 229,218,000 bushels, smallest crop since 1919.

Increased world demand for wheat was shown in figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics giving the average weekly world shipments at 12,000,000 bushels for the first 35 weeks of the crop year which started last Aug. 1.

This compared with an average of 9,700,000 bushels in the corresponding period last year. North American shipments, almost exclusively Canadian, have averaged 4,000,000 weekly compared with 4,000,000 last year.

Greater average increases have been shown in shipments from two other important exporting areas. Argentina's average has risen from 1,600,000 to 3,500,000 bushels a week and those of the Danubian countries from 500,000 to 1,600,000 weekly.

Australia's average, however, dropped from 2,300,000 to 2,000,000 bushels.

Canada exported up to April 2 a total of 142,032,024 bushels compared with 136,411,424 during the corresponding period last year. Overseas clearances at 106,408,950 were about 5,000,000 bushels higher than a year before.

William The Conqueror

Unfortunate Incident Occurred At Coronation In 1066

Of all the unusual incidents which have marked many previous coronations, the bloodiest occurred at crowning of William the Conqueror in 1066. The Norman prince had invaded England and gained the victory at Hastings.

On Christmas, 1066, a wild storm day, William was crowned at Westminster. For the time being there was no Archbishop of Canterbury, so the ceremony was performed by the Archbishop of York.

When the Archbishop asked the Saxon nobles, formerly subjects of Harold II, if they would receive William as their King there was such a responsive shout of approval that William's Norman soldiers, not understanding the language, mistaking the demonstration for signs of revolt, rushed in with drawn swords, and put many a good Saxon to death.

In a few minutes the then grey building was empty save for the King, prelates and monks, but the prayers and litany went on and though robbed of some of its splendor the ceremony was performed with all order while outside William and his Saxon subjects were being trampled under the hoofs of Norman horses.

William I was the illegitimate son of Robert the Devil, Duke of Normandy, and was trained in a hard school. Three of his guardians were murdered in France, and it appeared the young duke-elect would suffer the same fate, but when he was only 20 years of age he stamped out a serious rising in the district of Beaulieu and collected one of many enemies with Norman rebels.

Wants Arbitration Tribunal

Gandhi Fearful Of Imperialistic Exploitation In India

M. K. Gandhi has suggested an arbitration tribunal consisting of three judges be appointed to decide whether provincial governors have the authority under the new Indian constitution to give an assurance requested by the Congress party as a condition to its taking office in six provinces.

He suggested the Congress party appoint one judge, the British government a second, and the third would be chosen by the two so elected.

In an interview, Gandhi referred to a statement in the house of lords at London by the secretary of state for India, the Marquess of Zetland, that the governors could not possibly surrender their veto powers under the constitution.

Gandhi said: "Lord Zetland's statement confirms my view and renders universal suspicion of British statesmen's intentions. I believe in friendship with Great Britain but not in imperialistic exploitation."

Preview Of Christmas Toys

Santa Claus arrived slightly early this year, as the toy manufacturers of the United States opened a preview of what will come down the chimneys next Dec. 25. Fifteen thousand new types of toys were placed on exhibit in New York for two weeks. Among the new models was a four-oxen pipe organ and silent roller skates.

The first practical electric lamp was patented by Thomas Edison on Jan. 27, 1880.

Well-Trained Sheep Dogs

Are On Permanent Staff Of English Great Western Railway

A great railway has to budget for a multitude of things, but it seems odd that dogs should be permanent members of the staff. The Great Western Railway of England regularly takes out licenses for 25 sheep dogs, chiefly for the purpose of assisting the sectionmen in keeping certain parts of the line clear of stray sheep which come down from the surrounding hills and wander on the tracks, endangering their own lives and causing delays and inconvenience to the trains.

The intelligence of the sheepdog has always won world-wide admiration, but little praise has yet come the way of the railway sheepdog. Yet, in addition to his other accomplishments, he has to acquire "track sense." He is trained, moreover, to obey commands from a considerable distance. One of his functions is to warn men who are working on the line of the approach of trains and he will not leave the line until all the men are safe. His "track sense" is indeed remarkable, and if caught between the sets of lines while driving away a sheep, he will lie down until the two trains have passed.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Shirking Responsibility

Passing On To The State The Duty Of The Individual

The welfare commissioner, Mr. A. P. Kappel, reports that children are more and more coming to feel that it is the responsibility of the state, and not themselves, to support their aged parents. "There are a lot of people preaching just that," he added.

Such preaching may go far to account for the dereliction, but it does not excuse it. To seek to avoid this responsibility is not merely culpable, it is unnatural.

Circumstances alter cases, we know; there may be instances where the maintenance of dependent parents is practically impossible for families which have the greatest difficulty in keeping themselves, but there is plenty of evidence that, even where such maintenance presents no insuperable financial problem, the attitude is that the community should assume the responsibility.—Hamilton Spectator.

A Good Illustration

Washington Knew Why All Parliaments Need Two Houses

Thomas Jefferson had some doubts regarding the wisdom of having two law-making houses in the national government of the United States, and one day he expressed this doubt to Washington.

"You are better informed on such topics than I am," said Washington, "but I will consent to uphold the system of England and America." He watched Jefferson for a moment, and then added, "You yourself have proved the excellence of the two houses this very moment."

"I?" exclaimed Jefferson, "how is that, General?"

"You turned your hot tea from the cup to the saucer to get it cool," replied Washington. "It is the same thing we desire in the two houses."—Financial Post.

The British Constitution Has Never Recognized Office of Prime Minister

To Obtain Best Results

Brooder Equipment Must Be In Perfect Working Order

After making sure that your chicks will be available at a certain date the next step is to check up on the brooder equipment. Houses and "furniture" may require cleaning and disinfecting. The brooder unit should then be gone over and put into working order. A check-up may indicate that new thermostats, new gates, new first floor controls, or other part of your unit are necessary before you put baby chicks under the protective coverings of the brooder. After the unit has been overhauled it should be set up, and operated for at least a couple of days before the chicks are placed in it.

For newcomers in the business it would not be amiss if the brooder was operated for two or three days prior to the arrival of the chicks, the poultryman would then be sure of maintaining a uniform temperature.

Brooding is the process of taking baby chicks from an incubator temperature of 100 degrees, and providing suitable brooder room conditions that will properly "harden off" the chicks until they are able to look after themselves. It must be remembered that the only protection baby chicks have is the soft down that covers them. A constant heat is thus necessary to keep them healthy and growing.

Experimental work at the University of New Hampshire has constituted that a cool room stimulates feather growth; chicks can also stand a low room temperature provided that an adequate source of heat is supplied by the brooder in a restricted area.

Electrician are necessary for successful brooding. These include: A good brooding unit, proper temperature, cooler area to which the chicks may have access, proper "hardening off" of the birds, plenty of room for the chicks, use of sanitary food and water devices, suitable rations and methods of feeding, clean floors in the brooding room, and avoiding of musty, mouldy, or spoiled food.

Touch Up With Whitewash

Nothing Better Can Be Used In Spring Cleaning Operations

In the spring the farmer's fancy may rightly turn to thoughts of whitewash for the long winter, the barns, and creameries, and home fences look much in need of being brightened up. Even dwellers in the city or suburbs will find that an outbuilding would be none the worse for a touch-up. Whitewash is as inexpensive as whitewash.

Persons are often deterred from using whitewash through the fear that a shower of rain might ruin it, but the Dominion Experimental Farms have evolved a waterproof whitewash for outdoor work which will prevent a newly whitewashed barn from looking a picture of desolation after a downpour. It is made up in the following proportions: 12 gallons of hot water, and add two pounds of salt and one pound of sulphate of zinc dissolved in two gallons of water. To this add two gallons of skim-milk. The ounces of alum, though not essential, improves the wash. Salt should be omitted if the whitewash is required for metal surfaces which rust.

For farm buildings, a disinfectant whitewash may be desirable. Here is a recipe recommended by the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Saskatchewan. First, 50 pounds of lime are dissolved in eight gallons of boiling water. To this is added six pounds of water which has ten pounds of salt and one pound of alum dissolved in it. A can of lye is added to every 25 gallons of the mixture. A pound of cement to every three gallons is gradually added and thoroughly stirred. The object of using the alum is to prevent the lime from rubbing off. Cement makes a more creamy mixture, so that it is easier to apply and more surface is covered. Lye is added for the purpose of killing vermin. A quart of cresol disinfectant to every eight gallons would serve the same purpose. Lye is preferred when the colour is to be kept white.

Place Dependence On The Fleet One in the eye for the Dismal Jimmies who are always telling us just how badly beaten we are going to be in the next war, Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, reassures the nation about the supremacy of the fleet. The plain man will be pleased at this plain speaking. It is an agreeable experience to hear a cabinet minister inspiring hope by the means of common sense.—Sunday Chronicle.

The "New Dawn" rose, a freak of nature, was the first plant patented under the plant patent act. It was found growing among a group of Van Fleet roses.

Bones of 2,000 hippopotami, killed by prehistoric hunters, were found in a single cave in Sicily.

In his cable from London telling that the salary of Mr. Baldwin is to be fixed by statute at $50,000 a year, George Hamilton sent out the measure:

"For the first time it will give statutory recognition to the position of Prime Minister."

This, we imagine, will surprise a great many. Yet the fact is that the office or post of "Prime Minister" has never been recognized by the British constitution. It is not recognized for that matter, by the Canadian constitution. The words "Prime Minister" do not appear in the B.N.A. Act.

It was the younger Pitt who accustomed Britain to the office, if not to the name. He declared, indeed, that "there should be no avowed and real minister, possessing the chief weight in the council, and the principal place in the confidence of the King. In that respect there can be no rivalry or division of power." Yet as late as 1829 it could still be such in the British Parliament that "the constitution abhors the idea of a prime minister; nothing could be more mischievous or unconstitutional than to recognize by act of Parliament the existence of such an office." It was not, in fact, until 1905 that anything like such recognition was granted, and even then the prime minister was merely known to the law as somebody who had precedence next to the Archbishop of York.

In Canada, of course, the office of the Prime Minister, with the authority and traditions surrounding it, has simply followed British development. Mr. King is paid his salary as Prime Minister. He is head of the cabinet, is a direct link between the cabinet and the crown, can dismiss a minister for disagreement with cabinet policy, advises the representative of the sovereign in such matters as the choice of his successor.

Yet all of this practice and tradition just "grew up," developed from the original idea of the cabinet being merely a "committee of the House." It is but one more example of the elasticity of British parliamentary and constitutional practice.—Ottawa Journal.

Russian Trains

Visitor Finds Good Accommodation Travelling Second Class

In this classless country it is a bit of a shock to find that there are three classes of accommodation on the trains. If you buy a ticket in any long distance Russian train you automatically obtain a sleeper, whether you need it or not. First and second class, and some third class cars are divided into compartments in the European fashion, but the axles divide the Russian train, you never know whether your sleeping companions will be men or women.

I was travelling second class on this trip and found the accommodation excellent. Carpeted floors, little tables with lamps and bottles of fresh drinking water on them, electric lights with handy switches, well sprung berths and good clean bedding made my journey very comfortable. I went along the third class cars and found the typical "hard" class of the continent, with the difference that the long wooden seats, and the shelves above them, made up into sleepers, and each person had one. For a small extra sum one could get bedding, consisting of a mattress, sheets and blankets, with a pillow. This is all provided for tourists without any extra charge.

In Russia going by Russian trains were notorious for verminous bedding. This nuisance has been tackled with Soviet vigor. All bedding is now frequently baked in special ovens. If one is bitten now, it is by a newly-acquired "tick" whose days are numbered. J. Allen Cash in Canadian National Railways Magazine.

Adventurous Navigators

Three California Children Started Ocean Voyage In Tub

Like the Three Wise Men of Gotham in Mother Goose—who went to sea in a bowl three young navigators at Santa Barbara, Calif., began an ocean voyage in a wash tub. The three, the oldest 12 and the youngest eight, had successfully negotiated the shoals of Mission Creek and were paddling out to sea with palm branches as oars when they were unwillingly rescued by a life guard. They said they were heading for Alaska Island for provisions before continuing their journey to New Zealand.

'Mary of Scotland' At Avalon Theater

"Mary of Scotland," the adaptation of the famous Maxwell Anderson play, takes advantage of one of history's most vivid lives in presenting Katharine Hepburn as the reckless ruler who risked life and throne for brief romance with the Earl of Bothwell. The picture appears at the Avalon Theatre this Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Fredric March portrays the bold and arrogant Bothwell, wooer of the reckless Scottish beauty. Here was a career as turbulent and colorful as any creation of fiction. She lived and loved as the chose in spite of her ruthless barons' determination to dictate not only her state policies and religion but her romantic life as well.

Add effectiveness is given to Miss Hepburn's portrayal of the title role by the fact that she bears a striking resemblance to the Scottish queen. Historians describe Mary Stuart as having russet hair, a high classic forehead, long oval-shaped eyes, a firm chin, high cheek bones, a tall, slim figure and beautiful, expressive hands. This is a perfect description of Miss Hepburn.

Morningside

MORNINGSIDE—The Bowles home was the scene of a very pleasant gathering last Monday evening, when the Seaford friends met to do honor to Arthur C. Bowie and his bride, who were married the week before at Galsbury. The evening was spent in a pleasant social way. C. McDonald and Mrs. C. Merrill, with several small children, staged a one-act comedy which brought forth peals of laughter from all present. During the evening the young couple were presented with a magnificent rack.

On Tuesday evening the friends from the Pleasant Hill and Morningside districts met at their home, then all went to Morningside school house, where a dance was held. The music being furnished by the Pleasant Hill orchestra. Archie Butlin, who was master of ceremonies, called on B. Stephens, who after some very pleasant remarks presented the young couple with a purse.

Mr. Bowie was completely taken by surprise and thanked the friends for the kindness shown to himself and Mrs. Bowie. Lunch was served and all expressed the best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Bowie for a long life of wedded happiness.

Blackfalds

BLACKFALDS—April went out as it came in, a lamb—and we have had some very warm weather, accompanied by hot breezes, which have driven out of the land what little moisture was left after the winter and the shower we had two weeks ago. A good downpour would be very welcome. Most of the wheat hereabouts has been seeded and in a short time the oats and barley will be in.

Ball Team Organized
The Board of Trade met at the hotel last Monday to consider the formation of a junior ball team, Blackfalds, but as there were already other organizations in the field, it was decided to postpone our meeting until Friday night so that other representatives could be present. On that occasion it was agreed to form a new sports committee, with J. Walker as president, B. J. McAllister as treasurer and E. Olive as secretary. With regard to the ball team, after much discussion, it was decided to appoint a board of managers consisting of Messrs. Harvey Miller, George Wade, O. Blue and Hale, to coach and look after the team. The boys started their first workout last Sunday and hope to give a good account of themselves during the coming year. MOTORISTS PROTEST TAX INCREASE ON GASOLINE

Throughout Canada and the U.S. protests of motorists over the exorbitant taxes imposed upon them are becoming more and more vigorous.

These taxes were imposed for the purpose of building and maintaining roads, although most governments refused to earmark motor revenues definitely for highway purposes.

In most of the States and Provinces, motorists have actually paid larger sums than have been spent on road building and maintenance. In most cases also the governments "bought on credit and sold for cash."

That is, they took the motor revenues into current account and spent them for general purposes, but borrowed the greater part of the money spent on roads, thus building up a huge bonded debt.

This combination of debt building and unfortunately in some cases extravagance, was bad enough in normal times. But when the depression arrived, governments promptly stopped spending money on roads, wherever it was possible for them to stop anything, but continued to collect from the motorist in license and gasoline tax at the same or higher rates.

Modern, experienced banking service... THE OUTCOME OF 119 YEARS' SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Lacombe Branch: S. J. D. BOYD, Manager

C.G.I.T. Annual

Craigen believed girls might give a golden crown to their mothers, by being more helpful and less critical about working in their home duties.

Rev. R. B. Layton in an interesting way told of the Coronation proceedings, and how the Archbishop as the representative of God and the church placed the crown on the King's head. The peak of the ceremony, he felt, was when after the act of crowning, the King and Queen kneel at the altar for communion and thus acknowledge publicly the sovereignty of God. Mr. Layton felt there is great need of loyalty and ideals. Speaking of the C.G.I.T. groups, Mr. Layton said that a "group" has a tremendous responsibility resting upon it, as it holds the destiny of its individual members. While some groups have high aims and objectives, others make it almost impossible for the individual to do what in his heart he knows he ought to do.

Winona Saunders gave a very good picture of the various activities engaged in by the three groups, which included a quilt and layettes sent to the hospital at Cold Lake, and also a layette which is being made for local use. Two of the groups read the book "Ling Yang."

Mary Moore gave her impressions of camp life and the closeness of spiritual feeling engendered among the girls as they study and play together.

Significance of Coronation
A former leader of the Senior group and the honored guest of the evening, Miss Eva Jagoe, Calgary, spoke of the spiritual significance of the Coronation, which is a covenant between the King and the people. This ceremony, she felt, can mean much or little to the individual, according to the manner in which the individual applies it.

Just as King George will be recognized by the people as King after his Coronation, so the C.G.I.T. is an outgrowth of our recognition of Jesus as King.

Older people, said Miss Jagoe, have a great responsibility to show girls what is good. Girls must learn not to think too highly of themselves to adopt detrimental habits such as smoking.

Should Protect the Church
In the act of consecration, the King swears to protect the church; so should C.G.I.T. girls do all in their power to protect the church, to which they owe justice and loyalty.

The C.G.I.T. program, rightly carried out, is a joyous living, concludes Miss Jagoe, amid hearty applause.

The program was concluded by the candle lighting ceremony, led by Miss Jagoe; Nina Sage and Betty DeLong were the candle bearers.

Seated with the guests of honor was Mrs. L. Matheson, Senior group leader, but Mrs. A. Warren, Junior leader, was unable to be present.

Ernie Olive is working for B. J. McAllister, who has recently had his house renovated.

A chimney "engineer" was in the village over the week-end and busied himself setting right many of the chimneys in the village.

Canada's Trade with the World

In the last calendar year Canada had a foreign trade amounting to $1,665,093,000, an increase of 19.7%, as compared with an average of 8.1% for 24 leading countries. In this exchange the Dominion had a favorable balance (including exportation of gold as a commodity) of $393,000,000.

Another feature of international trade was the tourist business, incoming and outgoing, totalling $355,566,000, the balance in Canada's favour being $155,958,000.

With the figures for tourist trade added to those for ordinary commerce, our international trade rose to $2,018,661,000, with a total balance in Canada's favour of more than half a billion dollars.

Banking plays a vital part in the upbuilding of the foreign trade of Canada, and foreign trade is the backbone of the nation's industries which are the foundation of Canada's economic structure.

Tees Tattle Tales

By TATTLE

TEES—During the past week the Tee school team motored to Stanton and let that team clean up on them. Although the game was close, the Tee children found themselves weak in the pinches, and are now practicing up to improve their style. Sunday, the Nebraska seniors came down and suffered a defeat at the hands of a team composed of Sargent and Tee combined. It looked bad for the home team on several occasions but in the end they pulled through with the win. The batteries were:

Nebraska—Ferguson, Parsons and Whitlow. Tee—Jeglum, Thomas and Pethybridge.

The school attendance is improving daily as the children recover from their seiges of measles and return to their studies.

O. M. Conrad has moved over to his new home on the main street in Hillside suburb.

A few alterations are being made at the old A.P. Grain house, and it should look very nice, according to present plans.

Visitors have been steering clear and the home people are busy seedling. About 85 per cent of the wheat will be seeded by the end of this week and around 25 per cent of the oats. The season so far has been ideal for Spring operations but rain will be appreciated at any time.

Bentley

The Ordinary Fellow

Late King George Supplied Name For New English Inn

The London correspondent to the Ottawa Journal says we are indebted to the Archbishop of Canterbury for one of the most endearing authentic anecdotes about the late King George V. It will be remembered that in a public broadcast the Archbishop told how the late sovereign was impressed by the popular demonstrations on the occasion of his silver jubilee celebrations, and exclaimed that he could not understand such manifestations because, "After all, I am just an ordinary fellow."

That little episode, so characteristic of King George V., is now to be commemorated in a novel way. A new inn has been built at Chatham, with a license transferred from an old place known as "The Brown Jug," and the new inn will be called "The Ordinary Fellow."

It seems a very happy departure in the nomenclature of inns and the surer way could be found of perpetuating the Archbishop's intimate revelation of simple royalty. "The Ordinary Fellow" Inn will excite curiosity and explanation, as long as it stands.

Television Demonstration

To Be Opened To Public In England During June

The first public exhibition devoted solely to the development and modern attainment of television is to be opened at the Science Museum, South Kensington, early in June, and will remain open for three months.

Demonstrations will be given of the B.B.C. programs on modern receivers, and a local transmitter will be shown in operation so that the receivers can operate when no B.B.C. transmission is available.

Rejects Darwin Theory

Dr. Arthur I. Brown, Vancouver surgeon, who arrived in Toronto to give a series of lectures on the origin of mankind, said the original man was not a baboon or a monkey and the Darwin theory of evolution "was all wet."

Henry VIII., of England, once gave a banquet at which the first course was served at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and the last at 3 o'clock the next morning.

Proves His Identity

Captured By Germans During War Man Discovers His Name

Maurice Menard, known in France as "the man without a country," finally has solved the 21-year-old mystery of his identity.

Menard, apparently a war orphan, was too young when captured by Germans to remember his full name, his identity or nationality. He remembers vaguely the disappearance of his mother and his life in a German concentration camp for foreign children. From there he was transferred to Switzerland. He could remember his last name but not his first, so people called him Louis.

When he grew up he became a sub-officer in a Swiss infantry regiment. The mystery of his true identity haunted him and he decided to return to France. He was arrested, for French authorities said that if he considered himself French he had no right to escape military service. He was court-martialed and acquitted of desertion and then called into service.

After lengthy investigation he finally got in touch with the French consul at Liverpool who was able to send him his birth certificate and clear up the mystery of his identity. He was christened Maurice Menard, son of Francois, a gardener, and Gerthe Menard. They lived in Epfort-sur-Saône, until 1914 when they crossed to France that his father might join the army and go to the front. Apparently he and his mother moved to a small French village which was captured by the Germans and after her death he was placed in the children's camp.

A Literary Prisoner

Trotzky Spends Many Hours Daily Working On His Book

Strong, hot tea is the sole stimulant which Leon Trotzky, former Soviet war lord, now in exile at Coyocacan, Mexico, takes to sustain him on the 10 to 12-hour daily (including Sundays) literary marathon which he has undertaken and which has made him perhaps the most famous first "literary prisoner." He is so busy dictating to his two male secretaries a 100,000-word opus about the recent Moscow trials and other literary works that he hasn't had time to leave his abode for a month.

Trotzky's sole recreation is strolling in the inner garden of the house, that of Diego Rivera, revolutionary painter, doing a little miscellaneous reading—Mexican and American newspapers, and a few European journals, and literary magazines, listening briefly to radio music, and chatting with his wife and secretaries, who are almost as closely confined prisoners as he. Trotzky's regime is continually guarded by eight uniformed policemen and from 10 to 12 detectives, all heavily armed. All persons and vehicles who approach are scrutinized. Only those who have authority credentials are admitted, and only a very few can see Trotzky himself.

New Plastic Lenses

Are Practically Unbreakable And Much Lighter Than Glass

A method of producing all kinds of lenses by the use of a new plastic material, similar to glass, was demonstrated in London recently. The invention, which consists of a moulding process, delivers from specially designed machines, lenses, specially polished and ready for mounting into cameras, binoculars, opera glasses, telescopes, spectacles, range-finders, stereoscopes, scientific instruments, and television apparatus.

The lenses are made by special treatment for their particular purposes from various plastic and transparent materials. They are for all practical purposes unbreakable, as well as being half the weight of glass, and having certain optical properties which are stated to be superior to glass.

C.C.F. Convention

To Be Held In Winnipeg July 27th And 28th

This year's national convention of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation will be held in Winnipeg, July 27 and 28, David Lewis, C.C.F. national secretary, announced.

"The problem of civil liberties has become more urgent in view of Quebec padlock law and in view also of the action and attitude of other governments to unionization in general," said Mr. Lewis.

Canada's foreign policy would be further discussed in the light of immediate circumstances, as would agricultural problems and the relation of the C.C.F. to them.

Preceding the convention itself the national council and representatives of the provincial councils will meet for three days.

Development Of Television

British Broadcasting Corporation Sees Necessity Of Empire Service

Urging necessity for development of Empire services in television was emphasized in the annual report of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The report pointed out that unless the remaining 25 per cent. of the next proceeds of the current license fee was made available by the Treasury the developments could not be carried out without detriment to other services. At present only 75 per cent. of the license funds are given to the Corporation.

Progress of the Empire services would probably be dictated by factors outside the Corporation's control, the report stated. It was hoped all three of the new transmitters at Davenport Empire station would be in operation early in the summer. Empire transmitters showed an increased use of 16,577 hours as compared with 11,682 hours in the previous year.

The report contemplated completion of the regional scheme of distribution of television by the erection of new and replacing of old transmitters and the construction and extension of office and studio premises. The year's balance sheet showed income to be $14,767,335, an increase of 2,404,485 over the previous year.

A Great Citizen

Tribute From Canada To Dr. Butler Of Columbia University

Lord Tweedsmuir: This is a message of warm personal greetings to an old friend. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler celebrates this week, I understand, his 75th birthday, the 50th anniversary of his graduation, and the 35th year of his presidency of Columbia. Few men have ever served more fully their day and generation—a service which I hope is by no means exhausted. He has been one of the greatest academic figures of our time, a great citizen of the United States, and a great citizen of the world. In his specific domain of education he has done invaluable work in linking humane learning to the practical uses of life, and he has set us all an example of intellectual integrity and courage.

Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King: As one who has enjoyed the friendship of Doctor Nicholas Murray Butler for a third of a century I join with his friends and his admirers in all parts of the world in extending to him the warmest congratulations and best wishes upon the anniversaries which he celebrates next week. To complete in the year of a 75th birthday anniversary over a third of a century of continuous service as the president of a great institution of learning is an achievement few men have been permitted to attain in a world filled with distractions and alarms. Doctor Butler's voice has been heard in tones clear and undimmed advancing the cause of international good will and championing the liberties of humanity. I trust that his drawings (not including the photos) are drawn by the author. He further stated "This book was started on March 17 and finished on March 28. It is 118 pages long." His books are type-written and neatly bound.

In submitting "Don Carlos" to the show, Lloyd apologized to Mrs. H. Lawrence, head of the Child Placement Department, for his thumb-nail condition, stating "the circulars and girls from four to 17 years of age show a wide variety of activity and imagination among these children who live in foster homes."

Lloyd, 34 years of age, writes novels. On display at the hobby show are volumes Nos. 31 and 32 entitled "Marzen" and "Don Carlos." The latter is a story of the present crisis in Spain. On the fly-leaf of Lloyd's books are brief notes to the effect that "all drawings (not including the photos) are drawn by the author."

He further stated "This book was started on March 17 and finished on March 28. It is 118 pages long." His books are type-written and neatly bound. ## Started In Small Way

Youth With Carpet Bag Originated Express Delivery Idea

The express business in the United States was 98 years old in March. The originator of the express delivery idea was a young man named Billy Harnden, and he started it with a carpet-bag. In the month of March, 1839, Billy conceived the idea of carrying parcels between Boston and New York and he little dreamed that he was starting a shipping industry that would eventually cover the continent.

Today the Railway Express Agency boasts continuous service on more than 220,000 miles of railroads, 28,000 miles of airways, and 20,000 miles of steamship routes, linking 28,000 offices and 218 cities in the United States and Canada, requiring the use of 10,000 delivery trucks. Last year the Agency handled more than 130,000,000 shipments and used the services of 87,000 employees.

Chiefly, the transportation is that of parcels and luggage, but the express service goes beyond that. The Railway Express organization will make collection of notes or mortgages, obtain signatures to documents, pay taxes, make bank deposits, examine public records, purchase goods, renew pawn tickets or redeem the articles they represent.

Some rather startling shipments are said to be handled from time to time by the Express Agency. Transportation of raccoons by rail and motor is quite common, and animals of all kinds, including lions, leopards, monkeys and snakes are said to be on the company's way-bill records. An army of insects was once sent by airplane and dirigible (the dirigible) from Hawaii to Kenya Colony, East Africa, (15,000 miles), where they were introduced for the purpose of destroying another variety of insect. All that, and a young fellow by the name of Billy Harnden started the business with a carpet-bag nearly a century ago.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Novel Cold Air Treatment

Doctor Claims It Is Successful In Pneumonia Cases

Lives of hundreds of children suffering from acute primary pneumonia are reported to have been saved by a novel cold air treatment introduced by Dr. H. L. Wallace, of the Royal Edinburgh hospital for sick children.

Writing in the current issue of the British Medical Journal, Dr. Wallace says: "During recent years it has been the practice in one of the wards of the hospital to submit every case of pneumonia to admission to an intensive open-air regime."

"This is carried out irrespective of the season of the year or weather conditions. It brings comfort to each child being placed on the windward side of the ward beside a widely-opened window so that the cold air without plays directly on the child's face."

An essential precaution is that the patient should be warmly clad to prevent chilling, the face being the only part of the body exposed to the air. All cases of pneumonia are thus treated, both day and night, until the temperature falls and remains at a normal level. Dr. Wallace says this rigorous method of treatment has been thoroughly tested in more than 300 cases. The impression of physicians and nurses attached to the ward, he writes, is that exposure to a moving current of cold air is the means of saving lives in children of all ages afflicted with an acute, primary form of the disease. It brings comfort to the patient, aids appetite and helps to render unnecessary other forms of treatment which might prove exhausting to a young child.

New Air Mail Route

Route From Edmonton To Yukon Covers 950 Miles

Postmaster-General Hon. J. G. Elliott has just signed a mail contract with United Air Transport Limited of Edmonton for a weekly air mail service from Edmonton to White Horse, Yukon Territory. This line to be developed further as traffic requires is regarded as the first link in an aerial northwest service to the Orient around the northern great circle route via Bering Strait and Kurile Islands to Japan and Asia.

The route will go via Edmonton to Peace River, Fort Nelson, Lower Post and on to White Horse, 950 miles. Postage will be the usual six pence per ounce and it is anticipated that from 60 to 70 per cent. of Yukon mail will go by the new air route, according to George Herring, chief superintendent of air and land mail services.

Good Salesmanship

Just as the rush hour was setting in, a girl standing at the corner of Fifty-seventh Street and the Avenue of the Americas in New York City, it pulled in ahead of a bus, and she ran to catch it. As she passed the platform of the bus the conductor said chidingly, "Here, here! Don't be so extravagant. We'll have you down in no time." The girl stopped running, thought it over, and boarded the bus.

Real recovery will come when there are more men working on buildings than there are watching them.

Gardening

With most vegetables the season can be greatly extended by using very early, as well as very late, types. In garden peas, for example, the time of maturity will vary from about 50 days to 75. Instead of planting only one variety, try the advisable to include at least three. Early sowing is essential but in certain parts of the country a fall crop with a quick-growing variety is also possible. In corn, the very early Sultan types mature weeks ahead of the regular season and some of the late, both white and yellow kinds, are on until frost, or even after.

The gardener is advised, for the quickest possible results, to purchase a certain quantity of started plants of both flowers and vegetables. These are usually purchased from the greenhouse, florist or seed house. It is important to get the varieties wanted, and on this account it is a splendid idea to consult a good Canadian seed catalogue before placing the order. The gardener can look over the various varieties offered in the catalogue and should make sure that the mature weeks ahead of the regular season and some of the late, both white and yellow kinds, are on until frost, or even after.

Among the flowers which can be purchased as started plants are cosmos, zinnias, petunias, marigolds, gladioli, nicotiana and a host of others. Cabbages, celery, tomato, head lettuce, egg and pepper plants in the vegetable line are all sold as started plants. The householder with only a little land to spare should concentrate on those vegetables which give the biggest returns for the smallest space occupied. Among such kinds are beans, carrots, onions, turnips, chard, spinach, cucumbers and beets. In the lesser-known vegetables, are leeks, eggplants, peas, broad beans and co. lettuce. These can all be grown in almost any part of Canada. Experts advise the inclusion of something new in the vegetable line each year so that variety can be gradually widened.

About John Bracken

Longer In Continuous Office Than Any Other Premier

We have a good deal to say from time to time about the Hon. John Bracken, the Premier of Manitoba, and we make no apology for devoting considerable space to him and his public service, because Mr. Bracken is an outstanding example of a Leeds county boy who has "made good" with a vengeance and it is probably true that if he had not abandoned technical agriculture for public office, he would have risen to equally as high a place in education as that which he occupies in government administration.

Mr. Bracken, still plain "John" to hundreds of his constituents throughout the township of Rear of Leeds and Landowne and elsewhere in the district, has just broken another record. In February, he tied the period of time during which the late Sir Rodmond Roblin served as Premier of Manitoba, the longest tenure of office enjoyed by any prime minister of that province.

Since Mr. Bracken is already longer in continuous office than any other premier of any part of Canada, that gives him rank as Dean of the Premiers, although he is still a comparatively young man.—Brackville Recorder and Times.

Control Of Wild Oats

Delayed Seeding Of Crop And Early Cultivation Being Results

During the years 1929 to 1934 Reward wheat averaged 23.2 bushels per acre on superphosphorus and 17.25 bushels per acre on stable land and an area infested with wild oats in the Experimental Farm at Indian Head, Saskatchewan. This excellent result was obtained by delaying the seeding of wheat and destroying some of the wild oats before seeding.

Reward wheat, which is an early maturing variety of wheat, was seeded as late as May 25th with good success. This late seeding permitted the killing of a crop of wild oats by cultivation before the Reward wheat was seeded.

Shallow after-harvest cultivation to encourage the germination and spring cultivation to kill wild oats, coupled with the seeding of early maturing grain crops, is one of the most effective methods of controlling this weed.

Other crops which may be used for deferred seeding are barley and oats for green feed. The duck foot cultivator was found to be a very satisfactory implement for after-harvest and spring work in the control of wild oats.

British Industries Fair Was Visited By Large Number

The British Industries Fair, which closed at the end of February, beat all records. In size, it was the largest indoor fair of any part of Canada. While City sections (miscellaneous industries and textiles) where a count was kept, were visited by a record number of foreign buyers. Already there are indications that the demand for goods from all sections of the fair next year will be greater than ever.

Modernized Foods

Blamed For Changes In Civilized Man's Physical Appearance

A declaration that inbreeding can and does produce healthy and vigorous descendants offered anthropologists a fertile field of discussion.

Dr. Harry L. Shapiro, of New York, pointed to the descendants of the famous mutineers of H.M.S.
Bounty, living on Pitcairn Island, in the mid-Pacific, since 1790, and said they are "healthy, vigorous and free from stigma of degeneracy" after generations of inter-marriage.

Modernized foods were blamed by Dr. Weston A. Price, Cleveland scientist, for changes in civilized man's physical appearance.

Dr. Price based his contention upon a long study of the food and teeth of primitive racial stocks.
He found that primitive racial stocks "lose their immunity to tooth decay and to associated degenerations" at their zone of contact with modern civilization as they adopt modern diets, "including white flour, sugar, polished rice and canned goods."

THE YELLOW BRIAR

A Story of the Irish on the Canadian Countryside

By PATRICK SLATER

By arrangement with Thomas Allen, Publisher, Toronto.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Coming to Canada, these women continued to suffer and endure as their menfolk out on homesteads these story hillsides—but there was a touch of hope thrown in. And where there is hope, there is joy.
One of the finest things Canada ever did was to put a kindly twinkle into the blue-grey eyes of these proud, poverty-stricken Irishwomen.

Their tongues may have been tart at times, but they were the service of their love. The Scottish Presbyterians may have been the salt of the earth in Upper Canada; but the Irish women gave it sweetness and light. These mothers of Methodist families were quiet, tidy, capable women; and it was a pleasure to watch one of them making ready an evening meal. They were wholesome-minded because they were home-lovers and were busy homemaking. And among women, it is the home-keeping hearts that are happiest. In the home of a family was proud of her station as such,
and as a result, she was content to relax and drift quietly into the matron class. Her Irish eyes were smiling. One was not startled those days seeing the worn eyes of an old woman looking out from a face made up to recall a youth that had faded. Has not every age of a woman's life a natural beauty of its own?

The bodies of these Irish women may have been stiff-necked with a curious family pride that had nothing much to justify it; but that very pride fortified their unconquerable will and helped to keep their menfolk respectable. There was constant in their hearts a depth of love and loyalty; and like my old yellow briar, it burst into bloom at times.

...for her price is above rubies.
She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands...
She stretched forth her hands to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hand to the needy...
She loatheth the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.
She is beautiful and beauty is yain; but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.

—The words of King Lemuel.

CHAPTER II

It was early in the spring of 1847 that I first got to know that young girl's family as I played across the Tavern Tyne at Toronto. It is a long journey back, indeed, from life's end to the little boy at the starting
of it.

My family were of the poor Irish.
A sailing vessel, returning to Quebec for lumber, that year called at an Irish port to load its decks, as cheap cargo, with famished and wasted emigrants on their wild flight
from the famine and the plague.
We were the first to board the ship.
The misery of that long, tempest-
stricken voyage in a filthy, fever-stricken ship. Half its human cargo were buried at sea; and as the vessel sailed past Father's Point, the waters of the bay were strewn with bedding torn
and overboard by sailors making the decks ship-shape for port. As a flat saw was being towed slowly up the river near Prescott, my poor father was stricken down. He went under a shallow earth quickly without benefit of clergy. My mother waited after the manner of Irish women, and counted her silver. It was a handful of coppers and a shilling.
A few shillings and a shilling.
The steamboat brought the widow Slater and her small son to Toronto. How fortunate it was she had only one child.

My mother took lodgings with Mr.
Michael O'Hagan in a small frame
house that still stands, in tottering decay, on the east side of York Street, a few doors down from Richmond Street. Our living quarters were upstairs in a small back bedroom, which we shared with a large family. She was only a slip of a girl, and she was one of them black Irish. You know what I mean? There was a darkness in her hair, the swarthy skin and a touch of down on the lip. Beyond the cruel, desolate ocean, there had been a sparkle of fun in her eyes, and the
tongue of the laughing little baggage had been always in the air. But the poor little Irish girl was fair diaphant, now, with the outlandish
ways of the crazy, new-world town,
and sore afraid of its streets infested with prostitutes and a bigger folk.

She was sick at heart, she was homesick for the earthen floor of a sod cabin, with its friendly smell of burning turf and the sour buttermilk.

My mother got old scrubbing jobs,
day work like; and I ran about the street. A little lad of eight or nine years has some clear-cut impressions printed at that age on the brain, and I remember the streets of the town, and they remain distinct and vivid to the end of my days. I got old jobs myself, splitting kindling
and doing chores in the morning for Miss Kitty O'Shea, who lived in a little frame cottage where Shepherds Lane now is. She was a joy, ruddy-faced little body, with silver always in her pocket; and she had fashionable ladies lodging with her.

On fine afternoons, Paddy Casey would come round with his open carriage and a shuffling pair. Miss Kitty O'Shea and her stylish guests
were driven slowly up and down King Street to see the sights and take the air. Of course, I did not understand the business at the time;
but no doubt my friend Kitty wanted
other folk to know the sort of house
she was running.

In 1847, there was plenty going on in Toronto to fill a young lad's mind and keep his face agape. We had come from drizzly Donegal where, in the little pockets and quarter-acre patches, "the pratties grow so small they have to eat them skins and all." Toronto seemed to me a stirring, lively town, and things were in a constant commotion. Then, too, there were the public hangings. Adventure bunted into a fellow round any corner; and there was lots to eat.

At the moment Toronto had become a booming frontier town. For fifty years previously, the obscure, isolated, little place had been struggling within its muddy soil to keep up the smart, modern and social swagger of the capital of Upper Canada. Its trade had been obliged to play second fiddle to high-hatted policies of crown government. Things had moved slowly. To amount to anything in those days, a person required an official job or an official connection of some kind.

But rapid changes were now setting in. The magnetic telegraph had arrived; and railroads were things actively thought about. The Canada Company was pushing settlement with vigor. There had been a crop failure in Europe in the summer of 1846; and the rot or curl in the potatoes that brought about the hatched cottages of Ireland and the shielings of the Highlands, gave better prices for farm produce to the log cabins of Canada. A flood of immigration set in, which in one season dumped thirty-five thousand comers at the port of the placid, little, official town—mostly wild Irish, but many people, also, from the Highlands and the English counties.

Hammers were early and late directions, cracking up frame dwellings and lodging places. In 1847, Toronto was a town of small creeks, tanbark and charcoal. With 17,000 residents, the little city had 186 full license taverns and 22 stored meat and liquor shops. Some of the immigrants brought little gear with them, but they had plenty of hatreds and ugly suspicions packed in their selves' effects as they crossed the ocean.

A few days after my mother and I arrived, I knocked up an acquaintance with a young lad by the name of Jack Trueman, whose father kept the Tavern Tyne at Toronto. It is a long journey back, indeed, from life's
end to the little boy at the starting
of it.

My family were of the poor Irish.
A sailing vessel, returning to Quebec for lumber, that year called at
an Irish port to load its decks, as
cheap cargo, with famished and
wasted emigrants on their wild flight
from the famine and the plague.
We were the first to board the ship.
The misery of that long, tempest-
stricken voyage in a filthy, fever-stricken
ship. Half its human cargo were
buried at sea; and as the vessel sailed
past Father's Point, the waters of
the bay were strewn with bedding torn
and overboard by sailors making
the decks ship-shape for port. As a flat saw was being towed slowly up the
river near Prescott, my poor father
was stricken down. He went under
a shallow earth quickly without benefit of clergy. My mother waited
after the manner of Irish women, and counted her silver. It was a handful of coppers and a shilling.
A few shillings and a shilling.
The steamboat brought the widow Slater
and her small son to Toronto. How fortunate it was she had only one child.

My mother took lodgings with Mr.
Michael O'Hagan in a small frame
house that still stands, in tottering
decay, on the east side of York Street, a few doors down from Richmond Street. Our living quarters were upstairs in a small back
bedroom, which we shared with a large family. She was only a slip
of a girl, and she was one of them black Irish. You know what I mean? There was a darkness in her hair, the swarthy skin and a touch
of down on the lip. Beyond the cruel, desolate ocean, there had been a
sparkle of fun in her eyes, and the
tongue of the laughing little baggage
had been always in the air. But the poor little Irish girl was fair dia-
phant, now, with the outlandish
ways of the crazy, new-world town,
and sore afraid of its streets infested with prostitutes and a bigger folk.

She was sick at heart, she was
homesick for the earthen floor of a
sod cabin, with its friendly smell
of burning turf and the sour buttermilk.

My mother got old scrubbing jobs,
day work like; and I ran about the street. A little lad of eight or nine years has some clear-cut impressions printed at that age on the
brain, and I remember the streets of the town, and they remain distinct and
vivid to the end of my days. I got
old jobs myself, splitting kindling
and doing chores in the morning for Miss Kitty O'Shea, who lived in

a little frame cottage where Shepherds Lane now is. She was a joy,
ruddy-faced little body, with silver
always in her pocket; and she had
fashionable ladies lodging with her.
On fine afternoons, Paddy Casey
would come round with his open carriage and a shuffling pair. Miss Kitty O'Shea and her stylish guests
were driven slowly up and down King Street to see the sights and take the air. Of course, I did not understand the business at the time;
but no doubt my friend Kitty wanted
other folk to know the sort of house
she was running.

RHEUMATIC PAINS TORTURE!

Don't let rheumatic pains make you unhappy. Rheumatic pains are probably caused by uric acid in the blood. GIN PILLS will remove the uric acid from the blood and prevent its return. "Pain is the enemy of health."

Europe to keep out Trueman's cow.
The moment to a woman's a cow.
And by the way, the young lad from Baltimore got her blue-grey eyes as an heirloom from Sarah Trueman of the Tavern Tyne.

On my bare visits to Toronto, you know, one of my pleasures was to take my stand a little before dinner-time at the head of York Street, and watch Her Majesty's Justices negotiate those barricaded openings in their haste to start a heavy day's work. But lately, I have been in Toronto much. The last judge I saw doing the trick was His Lordship, the late Chief Justice, Sir Glenholme Falconbridge. The ageing judge was totting a green bag and getting through seemed quite an effort. What a master Falconbridge was of the English tongue, and how sprightly he used it! He liked to catch speckled trout up our way also.
If a companion rowed the boat.
But he left it to others to do the long judgments, he did into English an exquisite lyric:

Come, Lesbia, while we may;
Let's love and love our lives away;

in the evening to look the situation over. The street door of the taproom was closed. There were boots and other strangers about the place, all in their Sunday clothes and wearing little pinnies. Everyone of them looked as handsome as the knave of hearts.

"I've something seemed to be going on in the front room over the bar."

I sneaked upstairs to have a look, but Mrs. Trueman saw me. She said I had better be slipping away home.

I asked Mr. Michael O'Hagan, our landlord about the affair. He had a drop of drink taken.

"Arrah, my boy!" he exclaimed.
"Beware of them cursed Masons."

He shifted his seat on the bench with the slow, clumsy, angular motions of an Irishman whose feelings were not very true.

"What, lad! They're a crew of black-hearted, murdering scoundrels."

Three or four cronies were with him in their secretive-like way, they had been salvering together.

Your Clet makes a secret even of his old clay dolly. It is hidden in the hand and smoked furtively from the side of the mouth. He smokes as if nursing a sore left jaw. We Irish are not very truthful, and sometimes that fact makes us not very truth-worthy.

There were slow, knowing Celtic nods in the room as face solemnly answered to face.

"Purgatory is not for the likes of these," declared Mr. O'Hagan, marking the mournful occasion by filling his pipe with borrowed tobacco.

"St. Peter-God bless him—claps every Mason into hell to be boiled in oil."

A long silence set in.
"Aye, the devil keeps a hot nail hanging on the corner-beam of hell for the likes of them."

Mrs. O'Hagan planted herself in the doorway. She wore a dirty short skirt, and her nose was akimbo.

One of the men present observed her condition.

"It swelled up you are, Bridget," he told her, as he twisted his neck and spat on the floor. "It is buttermilk you have been drinking."

"It be," said Mrs. O'Hagan.
"If it be a boy," observed Mr.
O'Hagan, "Holy Jesus be praised!"

Around the corner from their lodge meeting, the Masons got a thorough going over that night. The liquor Mr.
O'Hagan's friends had drunk had run hot in their veins, and their emotions were on fire. The murder of poor William Morgan was canvassed in all its gruesome details.

"I mind well the said William Morgan," declared Mr. O'Hagan, after the all had been drinking.

did not bring the murderers to justice.

"Oh, yes!" he told us, as he succeded at his duty. "We had midnight burnings, and horrible murders in Ireland; but if one peeked through the window, he saw the soldiers leading off the miserable creatures in iron to trial and death."

The story of William Morgan brought disrepute to the Masonic Order, and an element of distrust to the minds of the neighbors of every member of the craft. I mention it now, merely because it is a fair example of the unbridled prejudices of the times, which charged against every great body of men the reckless acts of its individual members. Every child knows nowadays, that the Free Masons have beautiful system of morality veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols. In their retreats of friendship and brotherly love, God be with them. May the rays of heaven shed their benign influences upon the full and exalted of their paths of virtue and of science.

But I feel that way toward them, not because of the secret mysteries they hold, ever concealed and never revealed—and which are very suitable for Sunday school instruction—but because they form a harmless and respectable body of my fellow countrymen. There is no unkindly feeling in my old Catholic heart toward any of the secret, fraternal, racial or religious societies that infest this young country. It is only nature for birds of a feather to flock together.

Such societies may all have some good toward a common good; but there is a danger of snobbishness at the basis of them all. They tend also to keep auster Canadian who otherwise might more freely break the bread of patriotism at a common board and offer up a land of freedom and equality of their united and sincere devotion. Religious and log influences in public affairs have been a blighting curse in Canada.

To get anywhere in my day, the aspirant had to be a bigot or a joiner; and there were no poor prospects for any respectable loaf.

There never was any question as to the kidnapping of Morgan. In January, 1827, Edward Sawyer and two other members of the craft, pleaded guilty to New York State kidnapping to induce William Morgan from Morgan from gaol to foreign parts, and there continually to secrete and imprison him." Sawyer was given a month in gaol.

The other side of the story was that Morgan had been helped to escape to Canada to avoid his creditors.

"But," as Mr. O'Hagan exclaimed,
"if the said William Morgan was alive, why did they not produce the man and save their ugly faces?"

The next morning early I slipped around to see what had happened at the Tavern Tyne. Himself was about, as usual, giving orders. His daughter, Violet, was making up a feather bed in the double bedded room and snore over the bar. No sign saw I of aught untoward. The first meeting of King Solomon's Lodge, No. 22, G.R.C., had evidently passed off without any one being hurt.

Young Jack Trueman may have heard more of that lodge meeting than was intended for his ears; or perhaps he had the gift of a powerful imagination. He claimed to have heard the lodge meeting, and he had been up in the bed in the back bedroom, with his head to the partition. In any event, the matter was much on his mind; and in the afternoon, he herded a dozen youngsters into the Trueman stable to hold a lodge meeting of his own. I was in charge of the dogs and Jack had a hammer and an empty beer barrel.

He gave the barrel three smart knocks; and we all came to attention.
"What now, brethren, is our first care?" he demanded, in the heavy burr that reminds one of St. Andrews.

I had my instructions.
"To see that the lodge is properly tyled, Worshipful Sir," said I.

"Direct that duty to be done," commanded the Worshipful Sir.
So I hammered three times on the inside of the stable door, and a little negro boy, posted outside, hammered back to tell us everything was in order.

But young Jack refused to believe his ears. Over and over, he insisted that we hold at him:

"The door is properly tyled, Worshipful Sir!"

So I went out to make dead sure about it, and then I quietly stole away on more interesting business of my own.

CHAPTER III.

Jack Trueman's dog was a black and tan collie with a bob-tail.

He was the general purpose breed of a drover's type; and he was all dog.
Jack claimed to own the sharp-eyed, self-reliant fellow—but that was a matter of opinion, merely. In the dog's way of looking at things, Rover owned Jack Trueman; and Trueman —he owned me. When a smart, clever dog has something of his very own, you understand, say a smelly bone or a crusty boy—nature has thought highly of his own property.
And he puts up with the smell of his own bone and the kicks of his own boy as one of the inconveniences of proprietorship, just the same as you and I put up with taxes.

Rover liked, at times, to have his paw throats for him; and, of course, sticks can not be thrown if they are not fetched. But he only fancied that sort of thing in moderation. When the sport ceased to amuse him, he would cock his leg against a post, and then run away on business of his own. This was clear evidence, you will agree, that Rover was the chief executive.

Jack Trueman had not bought the dog; nor had he been given the dog.
One day, Rover had left the drover's team he was looking after, and had dropped in, casual-like, to inspect the alley at the side and the stable in the rear of the Tavern Tyne. He fancied the look of the place and the smell of the slop bucket. Offhand, he decided he would like to own a boy who lived round an interesting place like that. So the two of them struck up a bargain about the spot. Rover thought they thought they did. There was a mistial misunderstanding so complete that things worked out all right.

One June day, we were down to the foot of Berkeley Street to see a double hanging; and that surely was one glorious well-filled day. There was a high stone wall clear around the prison which stood close to the bay shore; and the Fair Grounds lay open to the west. Two men, Turney and Hamilton, were to be hanged on a Tuesday morning. To give the public a tidy view of the drops, both before and after taking, a double gallows had been built facing the Fair Grounds and high on top of the prison wall.

Before the early risers were abroad, hundreds of heavy farm carts and lumbering wains came crashing into town with their loads of merry, holiday-making country folk from far and near. Along the muddy roads came also bands of stinky farm lads, faring stoutly on foot, with stick in hand and bag on back, stepping down 30 miles or so to see the doings. Two men were to be killed by the law in the morning as an example to the public; and the schools throughout the district were closed that the children might benefit by so valuable a lesson in morals and good living. That day the taverns of Toronto did a stirring business.

"Your soul to the devil!" said young Jack to me. "Let us hooray down and see the necks stretched."

The hangings had been set for ten o'clock in the morning; but an hour ahead of time there had

Hospital Meeting

clined Act read that the council of the Municipality need not hold an election unless a petition from 15 per cent of the electors, protesting against the measure, is received. The Department of Municipal Affairs requested the Municipality to follow the precedent as laid down in the Act. In view of this request, the Municipal Council would, in its opinion, be advised to hold an election without first receiving a petition of 15 per cent of the ratepayers.

Q.—E. Boulter—Why could the Hospital Board not be formed from the ratepayers of the Municipality and Town? Is it necessary that they be councillors?

A.—J. S. McCormick—There is no reason why the Hospital Board could not be formed from outside of either council.

Q.—J. Alexander—Would patients from outside the Municipality and the Town pay a higher rate for hospitalization than the ratepayers of the two municipalities paying for this building.

A.—A.M. Campbell—Yes. Q.—J. Alexander—Why is this plan an advantage over the old Municipal Hospital Plan?

A.—A.M. Campbell—Under the old Municipal Hospital Plan, a special tax of between 2¢ and 3¢ per acre would be imposed on ratepayers. Under the new plan, the additional tax amounts to less than 1/4¢ per acre.

J. Alexander stated that he believed this scheme would cause "gigantic taxation," but E. Boulter and H. E. Heath, who spoke immediately following Mr. Alexander, both questioned this statement, and showed themselves to be in favor of the project.

Mr. Heath said he realized the need of a new hospital, endorsed the project and stated it would involve not "gigantic taxation" but "small taxation."

J. Proudfoot declared it his belief that the ratepayers were entitled to a vote equally as much as the Town of Lacombe. Mr. McCormick stated it was his opinion that the Municipal council would not be justified in calling for a vote until receiving a petition from 15 per cent of the ratepayers in view of the request of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

H. E. Heath moved a hearty vote of thanks to the members of the council and the other speakers present for the fine work they had done on this question and for the amount of work they had already put in on the proposed project.
